The Tale of the Circle of Tyrants and the Arrogant Empire

Once upon a time, in the great Kingdom of Kayfabe, there stood a mighty stable called The Circle of Tyrants, or COT for short.

They were big. They were tough. They trained until the gym begged for mercy.

Every morning, before the sun even woke up, they were already lifting mountains, flipping tractor tires, and arguing over who got to carry the heaviest weights.

The villagers would whisper,

"Pound for pound..."

"Wrestler for wrestler..."

"Nobody wants to stand across the ring from COT."

Life was good.

But one cloudy afternoon...

A creaky old castle door swung open.

CREEEEAAAK!

Out marched a stable everyone believed had disappeared forever...

The Arrogant Empire!

"Oh dear," sighed the villagers.

"They're back."

Leading them was a fellow who believed every thought that entered his head deserved its own parade.

If someone said, "The sky is blue."

He'd reply,

"No. MY opinion says it's purple, therefore everyone else is wrong."

If someone ordered pizza...

He'd explain why they should have ordered something else.

If someone sneezed...

He'd deliver a fifteen-minute lecture on proper sneezing technique.

And perhaps his greatest enemy of all...

A tiny spoonful of mayonnaise.

Whenever someone offered him a sandwich, he'd gasp dramatically.

"Take that awful mayonnaise away!"

The children giggled every single time.

Walking beside him was his loyal elder companion.

A wiry old fellow who always seemed to appear from somewhere dark.

Whenever trouble started...

There he was.

Whenever arguments began...

There he was.

Whenever someone asked,

"Who's in charge here?"

He'd proudly point at the loud leader and declare,

"That's my boy!"

The other Empire members simply nodded.

"Yep."

"That's Daddy."

And pointed at the old man.

Nobody really knew how that nickname started.

Nobody really wanted to ask.

Now the Empire had one favorite hobby.

Not training.

Not improving.

Not practicing.

Not even eating vegetables.

No...
They absolutely LOVED...
Collecting strategies.
One strategy.
Ten strategies.
Twenty-five strategies.
A hundred different plans for every possible situation.
If one didn't work...
They'd pull another one out.
And another.
And another.
The villagers joked,
"They've got more strategies than a squirrel has acorns."
Meanwhile...
Back at COT headquarters...
Doctor Pain gathered everyone together.
"No shortcuts."
"No excuses."
"We earn every victory."
Buda Von Blitzen slammed another enormous deadlift onto the platform.
BOOM!
Nurse Amphetamine flew through another set of pull-ups.
Bouncing Baby Boyden waddled determinedly across the gym carrying his teddy bear and somehow still finished every conditioning drill.
Every member trained.
Every member improved.
Every member looked ready for war.
Soon enough...
The Kingdom Championship Festival arrived.
The Empire celebrated loudly.
"We've won another multi-person trophy!"
"And another!"
"And another!"
Fireworks exploded.
Trumpets played.
Confetti flew.
The Empire congratulated one another for hours.
Doctor Pain simply smiled.
"Congratulations."
"Winning championships is always impressive."
He paused.
"...when they're earned."
The COT wrestlers nodded.
Because everyone respected a hard-earned championship.
Whether it came in singles.
Tags.
Or multi-person competition.
The important part...
...was earning it through grit, teamwork, and skill.
Not relying on endless gimmicks or clever loopholes alone.
As the months rolled by...
The villagers noticed something.

Whenever COT entered town...
People stood.
Children waved.
Veteran wrestlers nodded with respect.
Even rivals admitted,
"They may talk a lot..."
"...but they always back it up."
The Empire still made plenty of noise.
They argued.
They bragged.
They explained why everyone else was wrong.
And yes...
The mayonnaise remained undefeated.
One evening, an old storyteller gathered the children around the campfire.
He smiled.
"Remember this, little wrestlers."
"A championship shines."
"But respect lasts longer."
"Winning is wonderful."
"But the greatest victories are the ones people believe you truly earned."
"And no matter how loudly someone tells the world they're the greatest..."
"...the gym, the ring, and your actions will always tell the real story."
The End.
