Princess Yuki Hazuki • IWA Women's National Champion

“Prepare for History.”

[The camera opens inside a traditional Japanese garden at dawn. A gentle breeze carries cherry blossom petals across a stone path. Resting on a wooden stand are two championship belts: the BBW Central Plains Championship and the IWA Women's National Championship.]

Princess Yuki Hazuki kneels calmly before them, dressed in an elegant white-and-crimson robe. After a long silence, she rises and gently places the National Championship over her shoulder.

YUKI HAZUKI:

My ancestors believed that a ruler should never boast.

(She smiles softly.)

They believed that victory speaks for itself.

[The scene cuts to highlights from Walla Walla.

Kurosawa Clash.

Polaris crashes to the mat.

One... two... three.

The crowd erupts.]

YUKI HAZUKI:

Polaris fought with honor. She carried herself like a champion.

(She bows respectfully toward the camera.)

For that... she has my respect.

(Her expression slowly hardens.)

But respect does not change destiny.

(She lifts the BBW Central Plains Championship.)

In Walla Walla, I claimed the Central Plains.

(She raises the IWA Women's National Championship high above her head.)

And before the month was over... I conquered a nation.

[The camera circles behind her as she overlooks a mountain landscape.]

Many wrestlers seek glory.
Many seek wealth.
Many seek fame.

(She shakes her head.)
I seek perfection.

(Yuki turns back toward the camera.)

Every sunrise is another opportunity to sharpen the sword.
Every match is another lesson.
Every championship is another responsibility.

[The belts gleam in the morning light.]

The Blood Bath Women have discovered that a princess is far more dangerous than a queen.

(She places one hand on the National Championship.)
Because queens inherit kingdoms.

(A slight smile crosses her face.)
Princesses earn them.

(She draws an imaginary line across the air with her hand.)

So let every champion... every contender... and every league hear these words.

When you see the banner of Princess Yuki Hazuki approaching...
...do not prepare for battle.

(She pauses.)
Prepare for history.

[She gracefully picks up both championships and walks away through the cherry blossoms as the screen fades to black.]

"CORRUPT" COR: CHAOS

ONE WORLD UNDER CHAOS

This world is corrupt yet I'm still viewed as a bad seed. Oh, c'mon, I've been on my best behavior lately. Well...I did tie Heaven O'Connor's hair to her chair the other day. But, I mean, it had to be done. But other than that...well..ya know what, just forget everything I said.

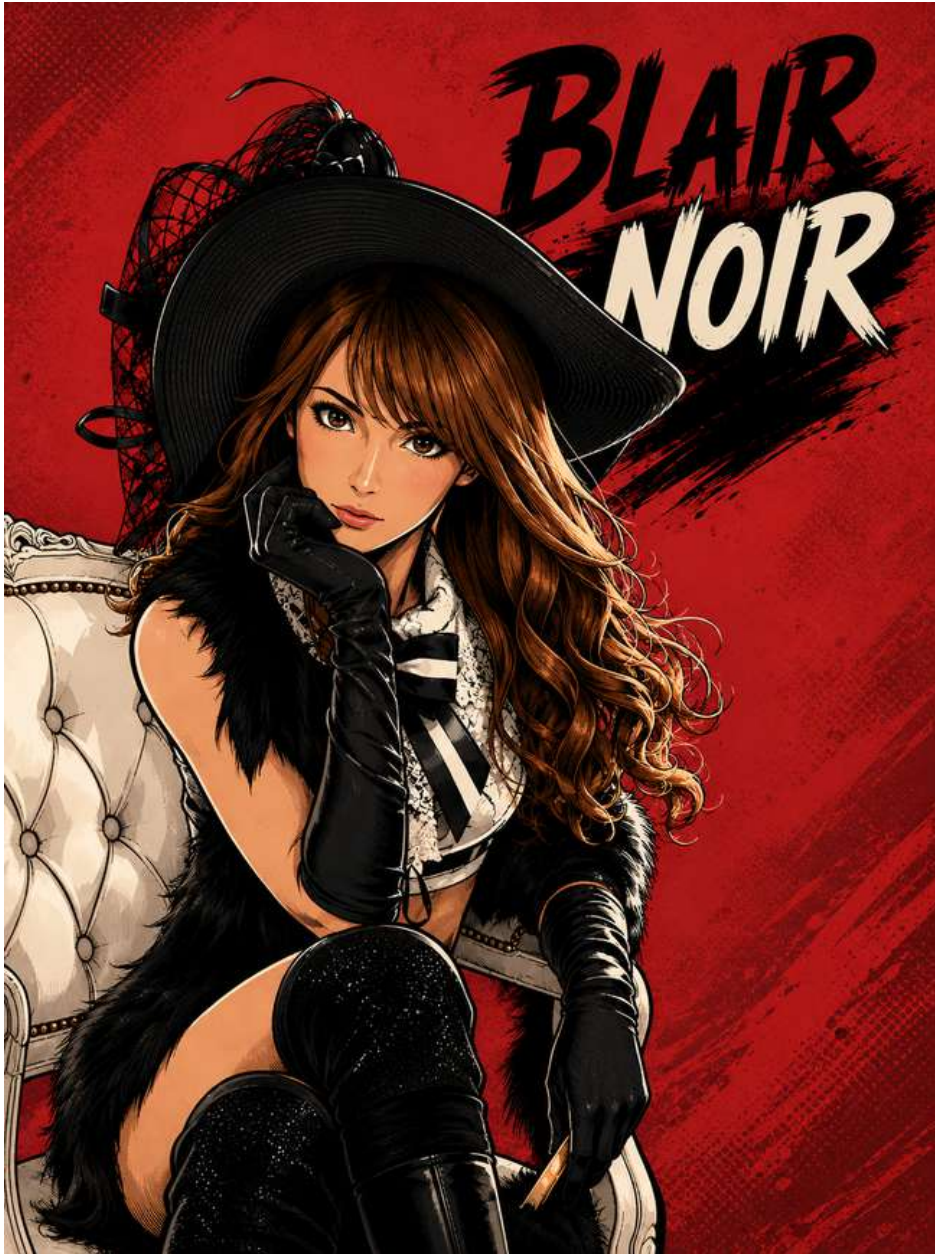

IZZY DEAD

IT'S NOT SO BAD BEING DEAD.

WANNA JOIN ME?

BLAIR NOIR

The case is wide open. Who will challenge me for the Vegas Gold Championship? I'm ready for a challenge. Soon enough I'll have the docket on my desk and whomever it is, I hope you're ready.

Goddess STARWALKER

I'm starwalking over everyone here in PDL. But that's inevitable really because when I show up, I show out, and when I show out, I win matches and championships.

Lets just say...I'm a goddess and that means greatness.

PRINCESS STARWRESTLER

In Galveston it was Princess vs.
Princess, and the best Princess (ME!)
won this time! The Prussian Princess lost!

We are now 1-1. Let's see who gets the next win, shall we?

LAZY NIGHTS

Purgatory took the Commissioner's title from me. Congrats, girlie, but don't think for a second I ain't gonna try to come back around and get what's mine.

Skye LaRue — IWA Women's U.S. Championship Promo

[The camera opens inside the VVL studio. Two championship belts rest across Skye LaRue's shoulders: the VVL Television Championship and the IWA Women's United States Championship. The crowd applauds as Skye smiles before speaking.]

SKYE LARUE:

You know... people always talk about overnight success.

(She chuckles and shakes her head.)

There wasn't anything overnight about this.

There were long drives. Tough losses. Nights where I wondered if I was getting any closer. Every match taught me something, and every setback made me work a little harder.

(She pats the VVL TV Championship.)

Then June happened.

I climbed to the top of the Vicious Valkyries League and became your VVL Television Champion.

(She lifts the second championship.)

And before the month was over... I brought home the IWA Women's United States Championship.

The same woman. The same month. Two championships.

(The crowd cheers.)

But don't mistake this for the finish line.

This is the starting point.

I want every woman in the VVL locker room to know something. If you've been dreaming about this title...

(She raises the TV Championship.)

...come earn your shot.

And if you've got your eyes on this one...

(She raises the U.S. Championship.)

...bring everything you've got.

Because I'm not interested in easy victories. I want the best competition the IWA has to offer.

I've never believed championships make the wrestler.

The wrestler makes the championship.

So whether it's the VVL Television Title or the IWA Women's United States Title...

(She looks directly into the camera.)

...I'm going to defend them with everything I've got.

June belonged to Skye LaRue. And July?

(A confident smile spreads across her face.)

I'm just getting started.

[Skye raises both championships high as the VVL crowd erupts in applause.]

The camera finds Alexandra Slayer alone for once.

No Mandy.

No introductions.

No interruptions.

Just Alexandra, seated in the corner of the ring, one Women's World Tag Team Championship draped over her shoulder while the PDL's Southwest title rests casually across her lap.

She lets the crowd boo for a moment.

Then she smiles.

"You know what my favorite part of winning championships is?"

She pats the belt on her shoulder.

"It isn't the gold."

Another pat.

"It isn't hearing my music."

She looks directly into the camera.

"It's watching everyone else pretend they aren't bothered by it."

The smirk widens.

"Two-time Women's World Tag Team Champion."

She shrugs.

"Pretty good for someone who was supposed to be 'all hype.' Pretty good for someone who was only here because of her last name."

She lifts the championship from her lap and admires her reflection in the center plate.

"Turns out the last name wasn't the advantage."

She glances back at the camera.

"I was."

The crowd rains down boos.

Alexandra doesn't flinch.

"In this division, everybody talks about fighting spirit. Heart. Passion. Respect."

She rolls her eyes dramatically.

"That is adorable."

"I don't need your respect."

"I don't need your approval."

"And I definitely don't need another inspirational speech from some underdog who thinks one lucky night is going to erase what I've already done."

She stands, settling the championship comfortably on each shoulder.

"You girls celebrate getting opportunities."

"I collect accomplishments."

"You celebrate victories."

"I make history."

She flashes a smile that somehow feels more insulting than if she'd yelled.

"So if you're planning on taking these from me..."

She taps both title belts.

"...bring more than confidence."

"Because confidence is exactly what everyone has..."

"...right before they lose to Alexandra Slayer."

She drops the microphone with a dismissive flick of her wrist, adjusts one strand of hair back into place, and walks away wearing both championships like they were designed to match her outfit.

For Alexandra Slayer, winning titles isn't a career milestone.

It's becoming a habit.

CHAOS GIRLS:

NAKITA DESTYNI CORI

Now with the DVC!

Nakita, Destyni, & Cori are all in the VIP Booth at a club.

Nakita: “Man with JJ Fries gone, we are going to do whatever we want - Not like he actually stopped us for real.”

Destyni: “The Van Chaos Girls came it hot - dropping bananas and jumping people..”

Cori “I liked that part of it! Is Evi crazy too?”

Nakita: “Yeah, they are cray cray. Will anyone respond to us or them? Or are they just gonna let us do what we want?”

Destyni: “Now Redneck Revolution’s been on a tear, wonder if they’ll try to stop us? And we are still waiting on Amy Jo to join with us, but she got some type of VIRUS?”

All of the sudden there’s chaos on the dance floor as Evi starts shooting confetti

Nakita: “There is Evi being Evi! Live your best life girl! Speaking of Evi, I saw her talking to Angelina backstage, oh and Cori, Angelina hit us up the other day

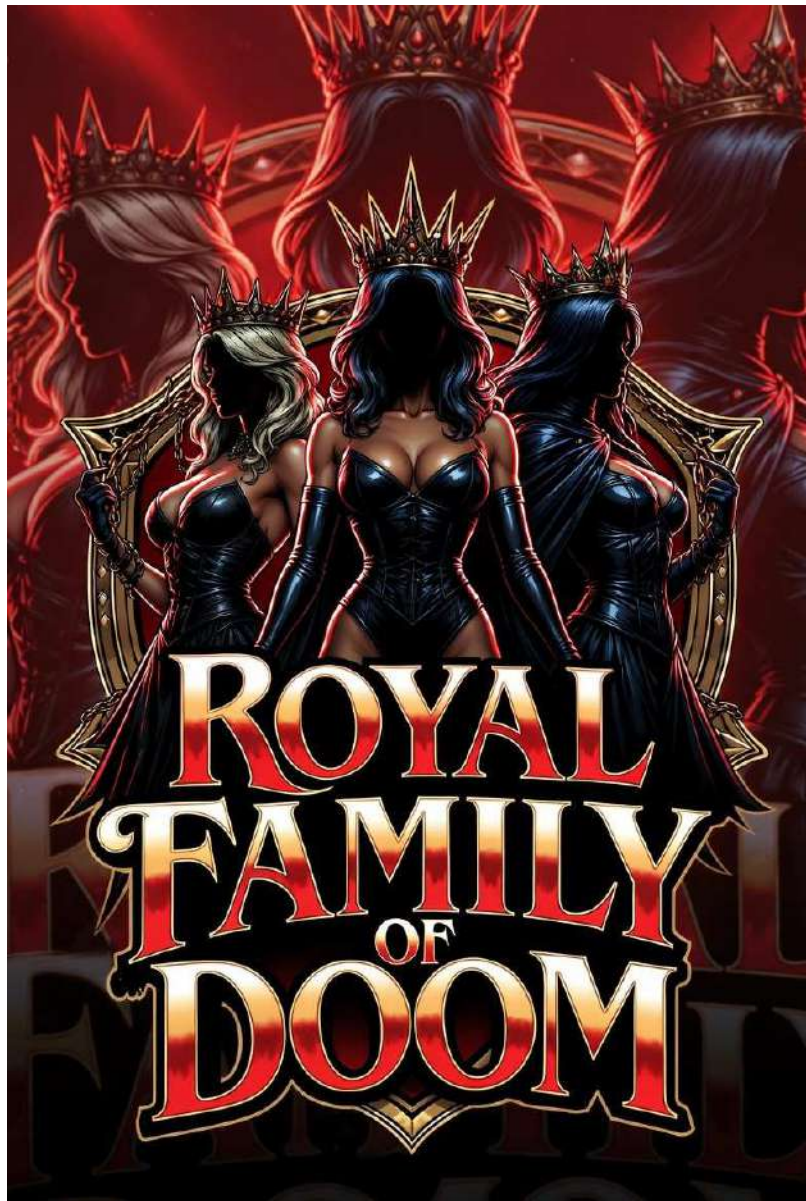

Cori “She is too goody goody for us - proolly just wants to be with her abuela praying.”

Destyni: “I don’t know Cori, she was on one in Mexico when we hung out - she... hold the f up is that her on the dance floor?”

Cori points at Angelina dancing

All three together: “You get it girl!
WHOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!”

Stormy Knight: "I'm a champion! Hurray for Stormy Knight!"

Starry Knight: "Hurray for my sister! It's unfortunate I don't have one."

Lady Tyranna: "I will brook no jealousy from either of you. This is the time to draw together."

Brutal Brandy Hollywood: "For a number of reasons."

Scotch: "Yeah! All for one and one for all and six times one is one! So... we are ALL the Rocky Mountains Champion!"

Purgatory: "That's not quite the right conclusion, sweetie. But that's okay. We have some very big decisions to make, and they really can't be in a house divided. So let's hear it for Stormy, and get ready for something very important."

Redneck Revolution

The scene opens at sunrise. The old pickup truck sits in the middle of a quiet field. Three championship belts rest on the hood—American Dream's PDL League Championship and IWA Elite Championship alongside the Women's World Championship banner waving in the distance.

American Dream picks up both of her titles.

AMERICAN DREAM:

"People used to laugh when they heard 'Redneck Revolution.'" -- She smiles. -- "They ain't laughing anymore." -- She raises both championships.

"PDL League Champion. IWA Elite Champion." -- "Turns out hard work beats excuses every single time."

Hillbilly Holly drives the head of an axe into a chopping block.

HILLBILLY HOLLY:

"Everybody wants to know what makes us different." -- "It ain't talent." -- "It's heart." -- "When that bell rings, we don't quit... and we sure don't back down."

Dragon Queen walks forward with quiet confidence.

DRAGON QUEEN:

"Power isn't given." -- "It's earned." -- "Every match..." -- "Every battle..." -- "The Redneck Revolution has done exactly that."

American Dream steps beside her.

AMERICAN DREAM:

"While others talked..." -- "We collected gold."

Hillbilly Holly joins them.

HILLBILLY HOLLY:

"While they chased the spotlight..." -- "We became the standard."

Dragon Queen folds her arms.

DRAGON QUEEN:

"You don't have to like us." -- "You don't have to believe in us." -- "But everyone who steps into the ring with us..." -- "Will remember us."

The three women walk toward the camera together.

AMERICAN DREAM:

"One team."

HILLBILLY HOLLY:

"One family."

DRAGON QUEEN:

"One Revolution."

They stop just a few feet from the camera.

ALL THREE:

"You can prepare for us..." -- "You can fight us..." -- "But you will never stop... the Redneck Revolution."

The screen fades to black as the Redneck Revolution logo appears.

The camera finds Professor Vitali Medved alone in the hallway, pinning another nonsensical chart to a corkboard. The chart appears to connect "Flow," "Coffee," and "Leon" with three different colors of yarn. A quiet voice comes from behind him.

"Professor?"

Medved turns. "Ah. Emily."

She smiles. "I wanted to say... I think what you did for Gabi and Astrid was good." Medved nods as though this were obvious. She looks down the hallway before continuing. "Sometimes I wonder..." She searches for the words. "...what it would be like." Medved says nothing. She smiles awkwardly. "I mean... things are changing."

"They are."

"I don't know how Rachel would feel."

Medved shrugs. "Rachel have many feelings. She feel whatever the writers want her to feel."

She laughs softly. "And Felicity..." Another pause. "She deserves everything she's earned."

"Correct."

"I wouldn't want her to think I was trying to... I don't know..."

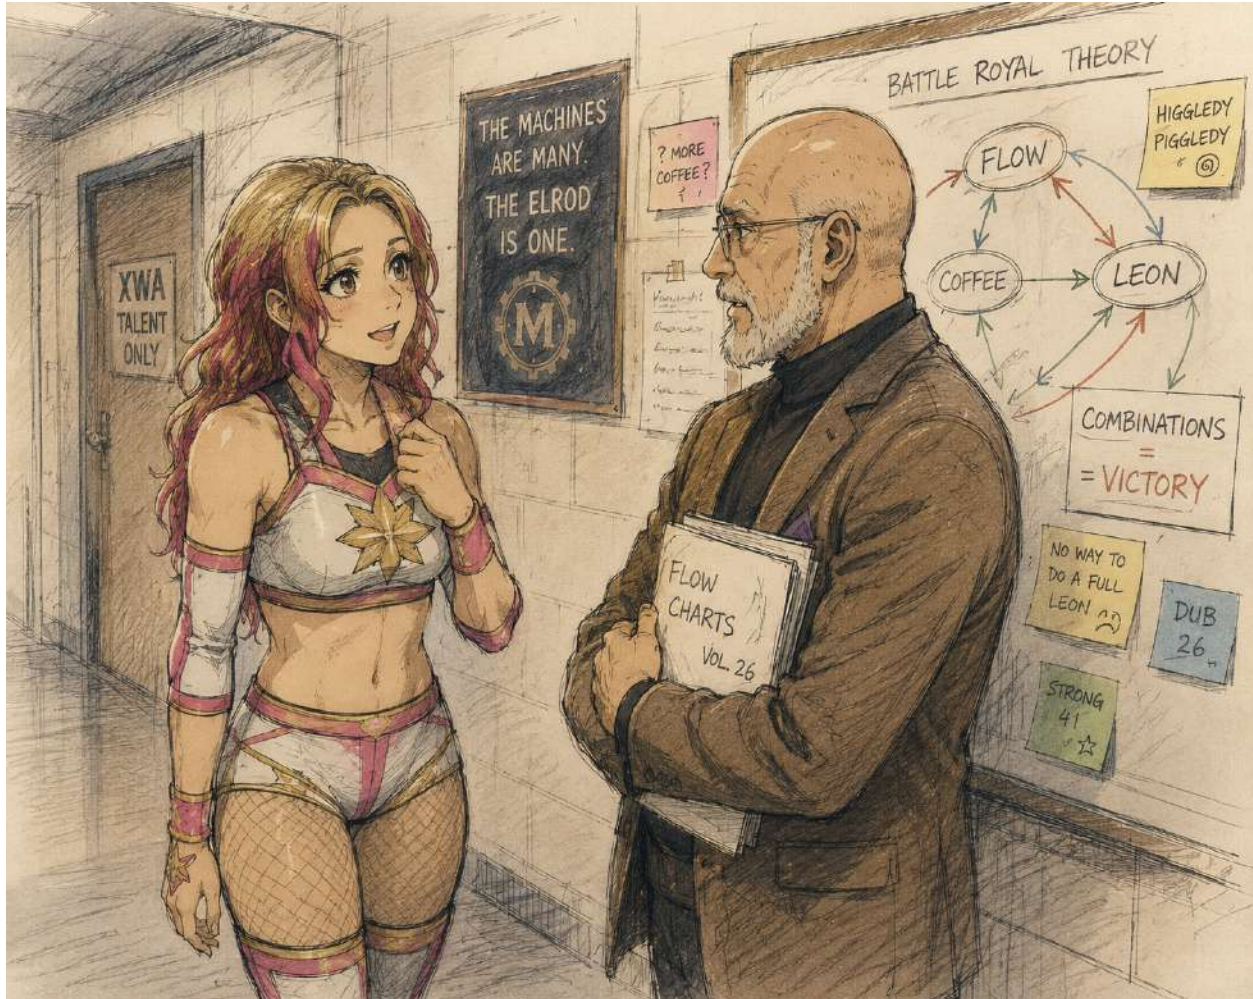

"Replace?"

She nods. "And besides..." She glances toward the locker room. "What about the other girls?"

Medved studies her for a long moment. Then he folds the chart under one arm. "Everybody have different story."

She looks at him hopefully. He smiles in that peculiar way of his, somewhere between profound wisdom and complete improvisation. "Is fine. Don't worry about worries." He starts walking away.

Without turning around, he raises one finger into the air. "Just take mask off and focus on everything nice."

Backstage Observer: Emily Price Finally Steps Out From Behind the Mask

One of the longer-running Machine stories quietly reached its conclusion this week as Everything Nice Machine officially unmasked and began competing under her real name, Emily Price. While Professor Vitali Medved's on-screen explanation has revolved around his usual rambling philosophy of "stories ending when they are ready," people backstage say the decision was very much driven by Rachel Yamazaki, who has gradually shifted several Machine characters from developmental identities into fully realized wrestlers. Medved, as one veteran joked, "is handling the TV side while Rachel handles the actual career planning."

Price is hardly an unknown behind the curtain. Before adopting the Machine identity, she built a reputation as a dependable utility player: technically sound, an excellent tag wrestler, and someone trusted to make opponents look good while still protecting her own credibility. Those strengths translated directly into the Machine persona, where she became one of the division's most reliable performers despite spending much of her run hidden behind the mask.

Her finishing move, the Nicepick, has quickly become one of the cleaner match-ending signatures in the women's division. Price calmly hooks her opponent for what initially resembles a standard front facelock, lifts them just enough to take away their footing, and then drives them straight down with a crisp lifting DDT. The setup is almost understated, making the sudden impact all the more convincing. It's the perfect reflection of the character herself: composed, unassuming, and capable of ending a match in an instant.

The unmasking also raises interesting questions about the remaining female Machines. With Gabi Alvarez (formerly Amazon Machine), Astrid Nilsson (formerly Valkyrie Machine), and now Emily

Price all stepping into the spotlight under their own names, attention naturally turns to whether the remaining members of the stable will eventually follow. For now, those close to the group insist there is no rush. If the recent transitions are any indication, Yamazaki appears content to let each wrestler emerge only when the timing—and the character—feels right.
